RUSSIAN & EAST EUROPEAN STUDIES

The U.S. “Needs More Russia Experts” — The Washington Post

Explore Russian and East European Studies (REES) at Northwestern!

Learn about our new REES major and minor!

Why is the most popular class at NU Prof. Saul Morson’s Introduction to Russian Literature?

German Chancellor Angela Merkel knows Russian...How about you?

What is he really saying???
Learn Russian and find out!

http://www.slavic.northwestern.edu
There are many reasons why students may wish to sample courses in Russian, Polish, and Czech languages, literatures and cultures, offered through the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures.

Considering a new major or minor? Some courses in History, Art History, Political Science, Economics, Theater, Film, and Humanities may be counted towards a major or minor in Russian and East European Studies.

Dostoevsky, Tolstoy, Chekhov, Bulgakov: Russia’s great writers explore the philosophical, political, and psychological issues that have shaped the modern world. Politics and the humanities go hand in hand in Eastern European culture: Explore politics and history through the film, music, art and popular culture of Russia, Poland and the Czech Republic.

Russia is a major player in global and US politics; learning Russian can be an asset to your career! Slavic majors have gone on to careers in the State Department, Department of Defense, Department of the Treasury, economics, international relations, law, journalism, medicine, and other fields.

Students also have been accepted into top programs at Yale, Harvard, University of Michigan, Berkeley, Toronto, University of Virginia, University of London, and other institutions. More than 12 of our students have won Fulbrights to Poland and Russia!

In 2016, a Wall Street Journal article noted that among recent graduates, area studies and language studies majors posted the largest salary gains!